Arboretum saved, extension placed to the north

Aproximately 80 raw acres will remain the arboretum, faculty senate says

by REX HOGGARD
News editor

For most UCF students, the end of this semester is the end of a long and grueling struggle. For the members of UCF's Environmental Society, the end of this semester marks the end to a long and grueling battle to save the UCF Arboretum.

Dr. Frank Juge of UCF's Academic Affairs messaged Dr. David Vickers, chair of UCF's Biology Department, via electronic mail April 12. "... the president has accepted our recommendation to utilize the northern route for the road and to include the area south of the proposed road, including the palm strand in the arboretum," Juge wrote.

The possible destruction of the arboretum has been an ongoing point of concern for many administrators and students.

The Central Florida Future received an anonymous letter dated March 1 accusing the administration of "displaying a total disregard for the UCF environment."

According to the letter, the arboretum would have been reduced from 80 acres to 10.

Other documents were also included with the letter. One was a copy of a letter to Dr. Gary Whitehouse, provost and vice president for Academic Affairs, from Dr. Glenn Cunningham, chair of the Chemistry Department, dated Feb. 9. Cunningham wrote, "I understand that some drastic changes are planned for the arboretum."

Cunningham stressed the importance of the arboretum in the letter, saying, "I realize, and want, the campus to grow, but can't we keep some areas like this one, or do we just have buildings, parking lots and retention ponds?"

Dr. John Bolte, vice president of Administration and Finance, responded to Cunningham in another letter, writing, "In this atmosphere, rumors, which never seem to have a point of origin, become exaggerated."

"Rumors notwithstanding, and with 500 acres of preserved lands on a 1,200-acre campus, any claims to the contrary or of a concrete-and-brick jungle would be hard to sustain," Bolte continued.

While the UCF faculty senate recognized the need for buildable land to accommodate future growth, it concluded in Resolution 1993-1994-7 on March 3 that "the arboretum be defined, protected, supported, and included as a part of the UCF Master Plan."

UCF President John Hitt acknowledged the senate's conclusion in an e-mail transmission from him to Bolte on April 12, saying, "I am very pleased that an agreement has been reached and that all are happy with it; this has been my goal."

The plan is to place the McCulloch extension to the north of the Cypress Dome and Oak Hammock (see adjoining map). Although this will eliminate approximately one-third of the scrub in that area, Vickers said, "[The elimination of the scrub] was a trade-off, but in most real world situations there are trade-offs. We were asked by President Hitt what we liked, and he followed our recommendations."

Other aspects of the plan include the future construction of the President's House

The UCF Arboretum, which was established in fall of 1983, will remain almost entirely intact and undisturbed according to the new plan.

Holocaust ad enrages community

by REX HOGGARD
News editor

In a press release dated April 13, the UCF administration announced that it "deplores the decision of the newspaper [The Central Florida Future] to run a paid advertisement challenging the horrors that Jews endured during World War II."

The advertisement, paid for by the Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust, implies that the Holocaust, specifically the use of gas chambers, did not happen.

In the rectangular, text-filled ad, CODOH states, "The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum displays no convincing proof that even one individual was gassed in a German program of genocide."

The advertisement was written

ISA wins Saturn Award for second time

□ The International Student Fair helped the group to win.

by REX HOGGARD
News editor

On April 12, Provost Gary Whitehouse presented 16 members of the International Student Association with the Second Saturn Award.

The award was given to the ISA for hosting the international student fair, held Sept. 27. The fair involved 37 nations and was held to promote cultural awareness.

According to Joanna McCully, coordinator of student programs and services at UCF, this is the second time the ISA has won the award. The first time was in 1992.

Whitehouse presented the members of the ISA with a trophy and a check for $1,000.

The 16 students who received the award were members of ISA's International Speakers Bureau. The bureau gives presentations at regional conferences and sponsors workshops around the county, said McCully.

"The dedicated team effort of the Bureau has enriched, enhanced and educated the UCF and Orlando community," McCully said. "The bureau attempts to make a difference, and it has succeeded on the Creol Pond. No time frame has been given for the construction of the house and accompanying road.

Administration supports new road plan

Although Vickers was hesitant about giving the exact dimension of the arboretum, he did say that the area will remain at approximately 80 acres.

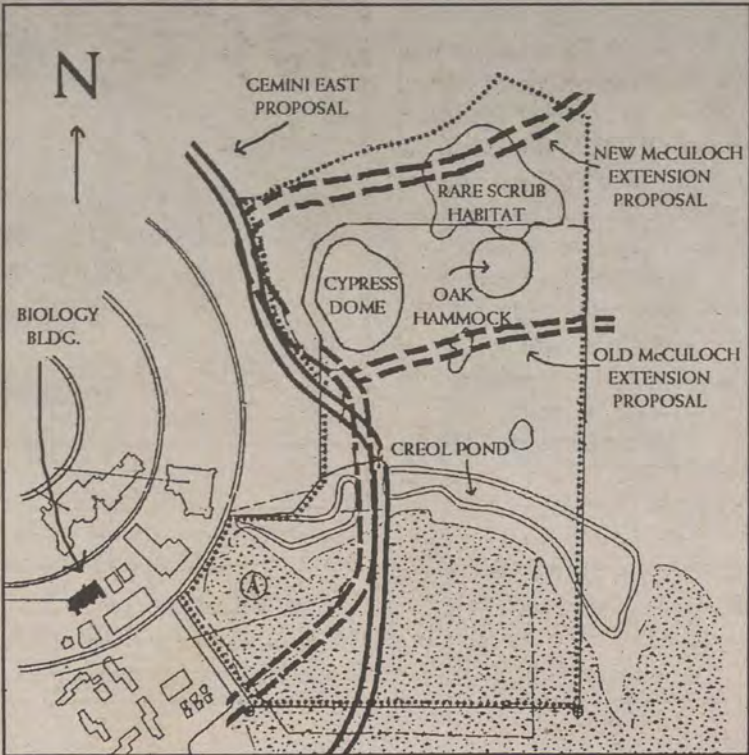

"Approximately one-third of the campus will be placed in some sort of protected status. This is more than we envisioned we would receive," he said.

David Allen, co-chairman of the Arboretum Committee, said, "We have made some concessions, but what we received in return more than makes up for any scrub elimination."

Dick Joslyn, an environmental activist with the group eco-action, commented on the realignment of land as arboretum instead of biology preserve.

"All the area [approximately 80 acres] will be arboretum, thus we will be able to enhance it," he said. "Whereas, when some of the area was biology preserve, we were not allowed to enhance or change the land in any way."

Vickers commented on the administration's support of the issue. "I was very impressed with President Hitt. He told us to make a recommendation and he would follow it."

The administration has been unclear as to when the boundaries of the arboretum will be established. "The boundaries are important. We need to [establish them] very soon," said Juge.

The timetable for the construction of the new road was also unclear. However, according to Peter Newman, a member of UCF's Facility Planning Department, the department plans to submit a proposal to the Board of Regents by mid-July, and hopes to begin construction before January.

"The Gemini-East plan has already been approved," he said. "Now that we have a plan in place for the McCulloch extension, we can start the process."

Joslyn mentioned the need to remain "on top" of the situation.

"We need to assure the administration follows what they said they would," he said.

Plastic bottles used to create new sportswear

College Press Service

NEW YORK—Environmentally correct clothing is a hot-button item in the fashion industry, and 54 students recently unveiled 63 designs to demonstrate how today's Diet Pepsi bottles can become tomorrow's thermal underwear.

The Students from the Fashion Institute of Technology and Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science were challenged by Wellman Inc. to create sports garments such as jackets, shoes, thermal underwear, slippers, shoelaces, vests, hats and mittens made from its Fortrel EcoSpun, a patented polyester fiber that comes from recycled plastic bottles.

The Designs of the Future, by Designers of the Future, show on April 10 gave the student designers a chance to showcase their environmentally-correct clothes before an international fashion community.

Wellman officials readily admit that their reasons for sponsoring the show stem from a desire to cash in on the appeal of recycled activewear.

"In recent market research aimed at the college community, Wellman confirmed that the environment, the solid waste crisis and recycling were top-of-the-mind issues on college campuses," said John Anderson, vice president of marketing. "What better way to bring this to the attention of the fashion community than by challenging the young designers of tomorrow with this competition. These young people have the future of fashion and the future of the planet in their hands."

The process of obtaining

EcoSpun from recycled plastic bottles goes something like this: Beverage bottles, ranging in size up to two liters, are made of polyethylene terephthalate, or PET.

The bottles can't be reused in their current form, but they can become a raw material for making polyester fibers, thread and cloth. The labels and caps are removed, and bottles are sorted by color. The bottles then are chopped into small pieces that are washed and dried. The shreds are heated, purified and formed into pellets, then processed further to obtain fine fibers that can be spun into thread, yarn or other materials.

Activewear companies that sell clothing made from EcoSpun include Patagonia, Blue Water Ltd., Critter Mountain Wear, North by Northeast and other companies.

New registration policy to aid students and staff

□ The plan should ease the registration process.

by TRACY WHITTAKER
Staff writer

For the first time, UCF is attempting a two-for-one registration policy that will allow students to register for both summer and fall classes this spring. The plan began the first day of registration, March 28, and continues through August, allowing students to register throughout the spring and summer.

"We are hopeful that the two-for-one registration policy will benefit the students," said Dr. Thomas Hoddleston of Enrollment and Academic Services. "Having both summer and fall proposed at the same time helps faculty plan ahead for two semesters instead of just one," he said.

UCF is the only state university offering this type of program, and the plan will aid both faculty and students planning for 1994. Around 6,000 students who are enrolled during the spring semester do not attend summer session, so these students now have the opportunity to register for fall before leaving this spring.

Dr. Edward P. Sheridan, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences commented: "This new program of registration will be very favorable to students who need classes that should be taken in sequence. Although this policy is a good idea, there could be some side effects with certain students changing their minds on particular courses after already registering."

Many students do not seem to see much difference in this plan than before, although some are finding phone registration more difficult. The more classes there are to register for, the harder it will be to get an open phone line.

"It made the process harder," said Tara Carbia, a junior majoring in legal studies. "I had to call back twice, and it took so much time. I guess that it was because people were on the phone for so long and it took twice as much time."

UCF Surf team wins regional competition

by REX HOGGARD
News editor

The UCF Surf Team won the South East Regional Surfing contest last weekend at New Smyrna Beach Inlet to clinch the regional title. This was the last National Scholastic Surfing Association contest for the year.

Team captain David Ilano, who placed third overall, said, "We are excited to be moving on to the East Coast Championships. This has been a great year."

The next contest will be the East Coast Championship at Sabastina Inlet next weekend.

Team member Den Lacy won the men's division, and Kevin Fredrick placed second. UCF bodyboarder Jeff Froemming placed fourth in his division.

UCF Surf Team members: Steve Kepler, Kevin Frederick, Ben Lacy, Jeff Froemming and David Ilano.

UCF placed first with Flagler, Florida Atlantic University, Palm Beach Community College and Stetson placing second through fifth.

The UCF "B" Team came in seventh in its category.

UF to build a regional campus in Brevard

UF says its regional program will not conflict with UCF's.

by TED CEDROS
Staff writer

Dr. Maxwell King, president of Brevard Community College, has offered the University of Florida the opportunity to start a satellite campus on its Palm Bay Campus. UF has accepted the offer and is planning on starting operations there in 1997.

According to Dr. Charles Coleman, Palm Bay BCC provost, the UF campus would use classroom and lab space available in the same arrangement that UCF has at its Cocoa campus. "No programs or classes will conflict with the agreement we have with UCF," said Coleman. "In fact, the UF program would enhance UCF."

Coleman has been ap-

pointed chairman of the committee to work out details of the new campus. Currently there is no information available from BCC, UCF or UF as to exactly what programs may be offered.

UF Vice-Provost Gene Hemp confirmed that plans for the new facility are only beginning. "We haven't even started planning yet," he said. "There is interest from legislators in UF having a campus in Brevard."

UF currently has two specialized schools in operation outside its Gainesville campus. One is an architectural school in Miami, and the other an engineering school in West Palm.

UCF was not informed of BCC's offer prior to its announcement, UCF President John Hitt's office reported. Hitt has been in contact with King since then, and the offer was discussed.

In a written statement, Hitt rejected any notion that a UF campus in Brevard would conflict with UCF programs. "Brevard County is within UCF's 11-county service region.

Other state university systems are prohibited from offering programs within UCF's service region, unless such programs are not part of UCF's approved mission or unless UCF is unable or unwilling to provide them," the report read.

Hitt pointed to the new joint-use library and the Florida Solar Energy Center as evidence of UCF's continued interest in the Brevard branch campus.

DAVIS, Calif. — The University of California-Davis campus has launched a Students First campaign to solicit $15 million in private donations to fund scholarships, fellowships, student-related academic programs and other financial aid for undergraduate and graduate students.

UC fees have more than doubled in three years, now costing students an average of $3,800 per year, with an increase of more than $600 expected in 1994-95. While the number of students applying for state financial aid has risen sharply, the percentage of applicants who actually get state grants has dropped to 20 percent. "Students First comes at a time when the state's economic woes mean financial instability for many families and for the university system as well," said UC-Davis Acting Chancellor Larry Vanderoef. "Through this campaign, we intend to bridge the gap between fees and available financial aid. We must do all we can to reduce the growing indebtedness of our students and their families."

UC Davis graduates now owe an average of $10,000 by graduation. Two to three times that amount is typical for graduate and professional students.

The campaign is sponsored by the UC Davis Foundation, a volunteer support group of alumni and business and professional leaders from the community.

There is currently an opening for the fun and exciting position of entertainment editor at The Central Florida Future. A journalism majors preferred, but not required. Applicants must be knowledgeable about writing and layout while having an interest in the arts. Call 823-8054 for info.

Future condemned by administration

by Bradley Smith of Visalia, Calif. In an interview with The Orlando Sentinel, Bradley said the ad had been placed in 24 other college newspapers.

The ad has also caused considerable debate at the University of Miami. The Miami Hurricane, UM's student newspaper, ran the same ad in its April 12 issue. In response to the ad, Sandord Ziff threatened to withhold a $2-million contribution to the university.

Edward Foote, University of Miami president, responded, "At a university of all places, if we err, we should err, if at all, on the side of freedom of thought."

According to Foote, the student newspaper could have been censored, since it is a school run newspaper; however, the administration choose to support the Hurricane.

According to Dave Bauer, the Future's editor-in-chief, the $114 paid by CODOH for the ad will be donated to Anti-Defamation League and the Holocaust Memorial Museum. Bauer also questioned UCF's condemning of the newspaper, sighting a $100,000 donation the school accepted from the University Club, an organization without a Jewish or black member.

The administration's release further read, "Acceptance of the ad suggests that The Central Florida Future is willing to value financial gain over intellectual honesty and sensitivity to the historic record."

A group of 12 Future staff members issued their own press release the evening of April 13, which read in part, "The editor-in-chief has failed to act in the collective responsibility and accepted this ad solely on his own bad faith and judgment."

Thrift stores offer new look

College Press Service

From the shiny bell bottoms of disco to old flannel shirts of grunge, the most popular look for the '90s is retro, according to students who have honed their sense of what's authentic on trips to thrift stores.

Goodwill and St. Joseph's Distribution Center are becoming more popular than department stores with the "phat" of contemporary society.

Thrift stores offer a wide variety of used items, with the most popular item being clothing. Here, someone's discarded junk can be another person's collected treasure. It is not unusual to find vintage clothing from other eras among the piles and racks of clothing offered. Shopping can become not a chore, but a mini-adventure with guilt-free, affordable purchases.

Tight-budgeted University of Southwestern Louisiana students agree that they are shopping at thrift stores as a solution to their budgetary needs, and also because it's fun.

"The reason why I thrift shop is because it's a hobby," said Rachel Le Tulle, a general studies junior whose favorite shop is St. Joseph's Distribution Center. "And because it's so inexpensive, I can find many great things for a cheaper price."

"It's a lot of fun, because I'll go in and find something that I'm not even looking for, and I couldn't normally find those kinds of things in a store."

Rita King, who has worked at St. Joseph's for four years, said that she noticed a significant increase in the number of young people shopping there within the past year.

"I think everyone is going to a thrift shop now," she said. "I've enjoyed working with the young people the most. It amazes me to see what they like."

"Something that I would throw away, they pick up," she said, laughing.

King added that although younger people bring a lot of business to St. Joseph's, the clientele varies in all aspects.

"We see just about everyone," King said. "We even have people that come from out of town just to shop here. I have some ladies from Opelousas, St. Martinville, Breau Bridge, Cade and Maurice."

"It helps them because we sell at minimal prices," King said, adding that all funds go directly to the St. Joseph's Men's Shelter.

Petty Robinson, manager of Ambassador Cafeteria's Goodwill store, recalled a time when Goodwill was in an old warehouse.

"We started in a warehouse in Broussard. There was no air conditioning in the warehouse and no heat," she said. "We were just trying to make an old warehouse look like a retail store before this store was built."

Robinson stressed the quality of the merchandise sold at Goodwill stores. "We get $180 designer blouses from Anne Klein and Ellen

Pro-life inserts vandalized

by TRACY WHITTAKER
Staff writer

The April 13 edition of The Central Florida Future included an insert from the Human Life Alliance of Minnesota Inc., a pro-life organization. The insert included 12 pages of pro-life information along with photos of developing fetuses.

The morning this paper was distributed, there was a young lady reported to have been removing the inserts and replacing the de-inserted copies back on the stands in front of the library.

"When I went around to other Future newsstands on campus, I saw all the inserts to be in place, so this incident was isolated to the library area only," said UCF Bike Patrol Officer Steven Carmagnola.

According to Carmagnola, the individual who was removing the inserts obviously did not realize she was committing vandalism. The HLAMI spent a relatively large sum of money on the insert, and the student body had every right to read what the organization had to say.

In a letter dated April 13, Timothy Rasmussen wrote, "Evidently this group is trying to protest in a more civilized fashion. Somebody didn't want the HLAMI to get its message out and resorted to illegal tactics to limit its right to free speech."

The incident was an isolated case. No suspects have been named at this time.

to achieve," said Moorison. "The look I'm going for, really, is just to be myself. If the grunge look is me, then I'm grungy."

Angelique Guillory, a general studies junior, mentioned another use for used clothing.

"They make great costumes," she said. "So, when Mardi Gras and Halloween come around, you can buy the best stuff at basement prices."

"People are getting wise toward buying products and shopping," said Guillory, noting that people are starting ing to buy more generic items from retail stores. "Shopping wisely fits naturally into the clothing area of the economy."

Guillory has many friends that share her hobby. "All my friends get together and they'll show me what they bought, and I'll show them what I bought," she said. "It's a lot of fun."

If individuality is what the '90s are about, then that is the essence of shopping at thrift stores on a bargain budget.

"You can put pieces together and have a vintage look, or a grunge look, or a punk look," Guillory added. "You can basically pick up any kind of look you want to if you shop long enough and hard enough."

There is a market in used clothing. Personally, I think, since I'm into music, that that has a lot to do with why I shop there [a thrift store].

Tracy, and we sell these for $3.49," Robinson said. "We get a few people that are clotheshorses and they come here in the morning and rack up on $100 and $200 stuff for just $3.49. That is a real deal!"

Wilbert Moorison, a music theory freshman, said he can "never pass up a bargain."

"There's a market in used clothing," he said. "Personally, I think since I'm into music, that that has a lot to do with why I shop there. I see a lot of artists there, too. I think they're trying to project an image."

"Some people go with the grunge look and some people want to be the image of the artist. Used clothes make all different kinds of looks easy

Credit card abuse high for college students

College Press Service

CARBONDALE, Ill. — As many as one-third of college students have the potential for serious credit card abuse, according to a study at the University of Illinois at Carbondale.

Although many students graduate with debts that they expected to pay, such as educational loans, some could risk going straight from graduation to bankruptcy because of unexpected financial burdens that result from poor use of credit cards.

Connie J. Armstrong, assistant professor in technical and resource management, and M. Joyce Craven, visiting assistant professor in health care professions-management, surveyed 243 students and found that one-third showed credit attitudes and behaviors that indicated future financial trouble.

Some of those factors include owning a large number of credit cards, having multiples of the same card, making minimum payments on balances and being unaware of the cards' interest rates.

"A credit history can become very well known," Craven said. "It could hurt graduates in their future careers because employers have access to credit ratings." A company might not be as willing to hire a recent graduate who has reached the maximum limits on all of his or her credit cards, compared with someone who makes regular payments.

Armstrong and Craven also found that most students in the survey were in debt not because of educational expenses, but because they used plastic to pay for clothes, gas, entertainment, travel, groceries and eating out. Only 3 percent of the charges were for books or tuition.

They encouraged students to avoid running up large credit debts by limiting the number of cards they hold, shopping for low interest rates and paying off the balance every month.

"Remember that the money you're spending today is tomorrow's income," Armstrong said.

Debate and ideas are what universities are for

The staff of The Central Florida Future in no way supports, believes in or condones any of the ideas contained in the the Committee For Open Debate on the Holocaust ad which ran in the April 13 edition, and a majority do not agree with the views expressed in the Human Life Alliance of Minnesota insert which also ran April 13.

What we do support, however, is the free and uncensored flow of ideas. This flow of ideas is the basis of the First Amendment, and the entire idea behind a free press is that invalid ideas, when placed within the arena of an open forum, will be proven invalid.

As deplorable and baseless as the ideas in the ad from the Committee for Open Debate On the Holocaust ad are, as personally offensive and entirely without redeeming social value as it is, they still receive full constitutional protection.

What we, the majority of The Central Florida Future staff, disagree with is the decision to run the ad without debate or discussions between staff members. The decisions to run the ad was that of the editor in chief's and no one else. However, it was decided that even after debate the majority of the staff would have chosen to publish the advertisement along with a staff editorial to explain the Future's policy towards the First Amendment.

The UCF administration's reaction to the ad has also been questioned and should be addressed. The administration condemned the Future, stating, "The paper has placed monetary gain above historic accuracy." The $114 paid to the Future by CODOH for the ad was donated to the Anti-Defamation League and the Holocaust Memorial Museum. This could hardly be considered a financial windfall.

When The Miami Hurricane, the University of Miami's school newspaper, ran the same CODOH ad, the resulting backlash was much worse than anything UCF has experienced. Sanford Ziff, after seeing the ad, threatened to withhold $2 million in donations to the university. Faced with a serious financial loss and mounting community pressure, the Miami administration stood its ground. "At a university of all places, if we err, we should err, it at all, on the side of freedom of thought," explained Edward Foote, the president of the University of Miami president.

The administration at UM could have censored the Hurricane, because it is a school run activity, but chose not to. Instead of pointing a finger and heading for higher ground, it stood firm and supported the school newspaper.

The UCF administration, which has absolutely no control over the Future, decided that a university is not a place for the free exchange of ideas or a place to learn, for that matter. All the UCF administration could see was possible contribution dollars walking out the door like they did in Miami, and that just would not do.

As far as the claim by 12 "staff" members April 13 that the editor in chief had not acted in the collective responsible way, in part, we agree. The ads should have been discussed and the decision to publish the ads should have been a collective one. However, as a majority of the Future staff now has voted, the ads were correctly published.

It must be repeated that the Future staff finds the CODOH ad without any merit and reprehensible, but for the Future not to publish the ad would have been even more reprehensible and journalistically irresponsible. The Future in no way supports CODOH or any other advertisers that are published in the paper.

Arboretum saved

The staff at The Central Florida Future congratulates UCF's Environmental Club and all those involved in the battle to save the arboretum. We would also like to thank Dr. John Hitt, Dr. David Vickers and Dr. John Bolte for their assistance in securing this pristine portion of our campus.

We also encourage all those dedicated to a cleaner world to continue to fight to maintain UCF's arboretum. Vigilance and dedication to this unique piece of land will prove to be our greatest weapon.

The First Amendment protects everyone

I like to think I have a pretty good imagination, but never did I think anything I did at this paper would make the top story of the 11 o'clock news, unless I were to buy an AK-47 and go on a shooting rampage.

Obviously, I was wrong. The amount of publicity this newspaper received after publishing Bradley Smith's advertisement challenging the validity of the Holocaust Museum's exhibits still blows me away.

After publishing the ad, I was congratulated as a hero willing to expose the lies of the Jews by some, and cursed as an anti-Semite by others. The majority of people, however, either thanked me for defending the First Amendment or admonished me for exhibiting poor judgement as an editor.

But, despite all the publicity, both positive and negative, I would not hesitate to publish the advertisement again. For I believe that an individual, no matter how repugnant his or her views may be, has the right to express them. I do not agree at all with what Smith has to say. In fact, his opinions represent to me the very nature of hatred and evil. But his opinions are just that—opinions, and I must be willing to concede that he has just as much a right to his opinion as I do mine.

We live in a society that champions the freedom of speech, and we must realize that this freedom applies to everyone, even if their views are racist, full of hate and based on historical inaccuracies. Most importantly, it must be realized that censoring and suppressing views that are unpopular, or just plain warped, do not make the problem go away.

Everyone has the right to be heard. True, there is no stipulation in the First Amendment or anywhere else that a newspaper has to print every advertisement it receives. So, obviously, I could have turned the ad down. But would that have been the right thing to do? Certainly not. Ignoring a problem never makes it go away, and that would be exactly what I would have done had I turned it down.

It is no secret that a number of people on staff here disagreed with my decision to run Smith's advertisement. A signed statement with 12 signatures was given to the media deploring my decision to run the ad. I would certainly be naive if I expected everyone on this newspaper's staff to agree with me, but many of those 12 people acted extremely hypocritically by signing the statement.

To begin with, the statement says those who signed it are journalists, when in some cases, nothing could be farther from the truth. Sorry, Craig Mazer, but writing a couple of record reviews does not make you a journalist. I also wonder what Brian Costello's signature is doing on there, considering he has stated many times in his column that he is not a journalist, nor does he ever want to be. Furthermore, these two individuals have the audacity to criticize me for not allowing them to use profanity in print whenever they choose; I'm inhibiting their free speech, yet they fully want to inhibit someone else's.

Dave Bauer

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Unfortunately, UCF's administration is perhaps the most hypocritical of them all. I was surprised (but not shocked) when a WESH Channel 2 reporter called for my reaction to UCF's press release condemning the Future for valuing "financial gain over intellectual honesty and sensitivity to the historical record."

First of all, since every cent of the money received for the ad will be donated to a deserving group, the Future obviously will not be making any sort of a profit. Most importantly, the administration's statement was extremely hypocritical, since it accepted a $100,000 donation from the University Club, a local group that excludes blacks, Jews and women. Apparently, UCF is the one who is willing to value financial gain over "intellectual honesty."

If the UCF administration's true intention of the press release was to promote their belief that Smith's opinions should not be given any forum for discussion, then they are the most incredibly unintelligent people to run a state university. Obviously, sending out a press release such as they did was bound only to create more publicity, and free publicity at that, for Smith. In essence, UCF's administration made a $20,000 contribution to Smith's group by sending out that press release. (Ever check to see how much five minutes of advertising time costs on the local news?)

No, I think once again, the press release was motivated by financial gain—more specifically, fear of financial loss. The advertisement in question also ran in the University of Miami's student newspaper, which jeopardized a $2 million donation from a wealthy benefactor. Even more damning for UCF is that, despite the fact that the school stands to lose $2 million over the ordeal, the president of the University of Miami defended the newspaper's right to publish the advertisement. UCF has proven by its actions that it will be a cold day in hell before it will stand up for the First Amendment.

Holocaust survivor speaks on CODOH ad

The publication of the Bradley Smith ad in your student newspaper presents a grave problem besetting our institutions of higher learning and the student newsletters.

The university's role as a place of free inquiry and the pursuit of truth as its sacred mission is betrayed by the decision of the editor-in-chief not to honor the truth, but rather to give credibility and credence to a pernicious lie, which is meant to unleash hatred and chaos. Editors have a sacred responsibility to the community and an obligation to maintain integrity and honesty in their printed information.

"Hate-speak" or anti-semitic and anti-Holocaust propaganda does not fall into the category of responsible journalism. It is the responsibility of a student newspaper to research information and its sources before presenting it to the public.

The Holocaust Memorial Resource and Education Center of Central Florida offers a wealth of authentic and documented evidence of the existence of gas chambers in death camps.

As a survivor, I further advise that interviewing me and several dozen other survivors in our area will offer ample proof to the editor that our families were indeed murdered by the Nazis in Treblinka, Auschwitz, Dachau and in other concentration and death camps.

It would also behoove students in institutes of higher learning to research the background of the hate-monger Bradley Smith before giving him a printed forum where countless students may assume that information printed in their newspaper merits serious consideration. Smith is associated with the Institute of Historical Review in California, which has been a clearing house for Holocaust denial and anti-semitism for many years; IHR is closely associated with the racist and anti-semitic Liberty Lobby which is linked with the Populist Party whose presidential candidate was neo-Nazi and Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke.

I fervently hope that the abiding principles of truth, integrity, honesty and responsibility will be considered in the future as the primary obligation, which will win over the irresponsible notion that "anything goes" under the free speech principle.

As a survivor, I am pained by the proposition that the deaths of 87 members of my family murdered by the Nazis in 1942-43 are subject to debate or question, and that student newspapers advance that debate.

Get the facts before running ad

The Central Florida Future, which purports to be "Serving The University of Central Florida," published a controversial ad last week paid by a revisionist organization in California. The experienced, well-seasoned editor-in-chief of the Future has taken it upon himself to fulfill the mission of the newspaper and serve the University community by publishing this information about the Holocaust which he deemed so vital for this community.

The editor did not inform his readers that on April 6, the University community had observed the Holocaust Day of Remembrance (Yom Hashoah) on campus, conducted by the UCF Jewish Student Union, and that a local survivor of the Holocaust, Helen Greenspun, spoke about her personal experience during the war years and the extermination of her family. The editor did not inform the UCF community that on April 12, the Honors Program conducted a seminar by a well-known Holocaust thinker, Phillip Hallie, of Wesleyan University, on the topic "Moral Ambiguity and Moral Choice."

He did not inform the students that an academic course on the History of the Holocaust will be offered in the summer "A" semester, or that a similar course on the literature of the Holocaust will be offered in the fall semester by the Judaic Studies Program.

So, to use the technique of Bradley R. Smith, the author of that so-called ad, this letter does not claim that the editor did not serve the community as he should have by publishing this ad. "Those who say it does, want to muddy the issue." Do I question the editor's noble intention to protect Bradley Smith's right to express his views that are so relevant to this campus? Of course not.

The editor has put on the armor of a defender of freedom of the press, and perhaps of free speech, and thus not only did he serve the community, but he also served the media by exhibiting his journalistic and independence a la Zenger.

However, this is not an issue of free speech or freedom of the press, although some would want to believe it is. It is rather an issue of the responsibility of the press and of good taste. Moreover, as related to the university's mission, on an academic level, there are the issues of the ability to analyze text, discern false intentions (let's not at this point discuss the "truth"), identify malice, and sense an innate intellectual dishonesty. Those noble attributes, alas, tend to disguise themselves as "open debates."

Read the ad's text, and note how sly it is, a masterpiece, if you will, of the Red Herring theory of propaganda. Its author claims in the first statement that he did not purport to deny the Holocaust; he only presents an argument against the Holocaust Museum. However, his message is surfacing throughout the ad. It is intended to attract the ignorant, the naive, and the novice on campus. This editor perhaps became a victim of his own ignorance, arrogance, and misjudgment. The university is indeed a place where we, as instructors, tend at times to debunk myths and advocate iconoclasm. However, we do it responsibly (I hope), through the power of knowledge and truth.

And indeed this is the message to all who wish to debunk and debate (editors of student newspapers included). Yes! Ask, doubt and be skeptical, but first, get the facts. Learn the history of World War II as presented by expert historians who devoted years to careful, methodological and scholarly study of documents and data; acquaint yourself with details of the Nazi methodology of deceit and use, or should I say abuse of language to obliterate the truth; read the slogan over the gates of Auschwitz (still intact, unlike some other relics of this awful past): "Arbeit Macht Frei," or "Work makes one free," and then you may have the background to understand why this ad echoes that past, which it attempts to deny.

Prof. Moshe Pelli
DIRECTOR, JUDAIC STUDIES PROGRAM

Never forget the Holocaust

Students and faculty alike were outraged and incensed Wednesday at the editor's decision to publish an ad denying that there is "no convincing proof whatsoever of homicidal gassing chambers and no proof that even one individual was 'gassed' in a German program of 'genocide.'" Although the Jewish Student Union of UCF supports The Central Florida Future's goal of "the free flow of ideas, regardless their popularity," it pains us that such an outrageous and vicarious lie continues to pervade the pages of a responsible press. By deciding to run the advertisement from the Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust, the Future desecrated the memories of over 11 million people systematically murdered by the Nazi regime.

Our heritage and legacy compel us to remember a promise to never forget. Never forget 11 million innocent victims. Never forget trainloads of human cattle shipped one way to a death camp. Never forget names like Auschwitz-Birkenau, Belzec and Sobibor, Treblinka and Bergen-Belsen, Mauthausen and Dachau, Stutthof and Buchenwald—merely a few of the over-100 major extermination and concentration camps dedicated to the genocide of an entire people.

There are those among us, perhaps misinformed or misled, who feel that the Holocaust is simply a chapter of history long-since forgotten. Nothing could be further from the truth. Indeed, the Holocaust continues to have a profound impact upon the lives of numerous students and faculty of UCF.

"We are deeply hurt by the notion or suggestion that the death of our family members is open to question or debate," comment J.F. Edelstein and Eric M. Ort, members of the Jewish Student Union and UCF students, who together lost over 25 direct family members to Nazi extermination.

"The core of the Holocaust denier's strategy is to try to create the sense that there are two sides to the existence of the Holocaust, and that through debate, the 'truth' will come out. However, the reality is, there is only one side. To debate the historical existence of the Holocaust—or to legitimize such discussion—is not to engage in an intellectually valid exercise, but to participate in a circus of hatred," explains Arthur N. Teitelbaum, Southern area director of the Anti-Defamation League.

It is the hope of the UCF JSU that this controversy will do much to ensure that in the future, the Future will responsibly check the validity of all claims before making uninformed decisions and furthermore feel comfortable that what it is printing is the truth. The message of CODOH and the Liberty Lobby is not a scholarly debate, as they claim, but a message that is well-orchestrated, hateful and false. These lies are harmful to a campus atmosphere.

The paper must be a partner in assuring an unprejudiced environment in which all students feel comfortable regardless of their race or religion. Printing the ad legitimized its hateful message. The CODOH has the right to express its beliefs, but it does not have guaranteed access to student newspapers to express its views when they are factually incorrect. Hate-speech does not constitute free speech. While the First Amendment rightfully protects such expressions, it also protects the publication's intrinsic right to refuse any printed material it knows to be false. Those who wish to read the Holocaust denier's material may do so; the U.S. Government cannot and should not censor it. The Future should not be misled into acting as an agent of the CODOH by bringing its lies to the public, but should be a messenger of the truth to its readers.

The UCF Jewish Student Union strongly encourages anyone who has questions about the Holocaust to please go visit the UCF library and see the information display there. Read the books and look at the pictures, in order to help clear up any misconceptions of the Holocaust you might have.

The members of the UCF Jewish Student Union

History is not on Revisionist's side

Despite Bradley Smith's disingenuous claim that he is not denying the Holocaust in his paid advertisement in the last issue of the Future and other college newspapers, his purpose is transparently to do exactly that. His allegation that there were no homicidal gas chambers at the Nazi concentration camp of Auschwitz-Birkenau is intended to suggest that if the existence of the gas chambers cannot be proven, other aspects of the Holocaust may be refutable as well. To support his allegation he states that gas chambers at Buchenwald and Dachau, which were once thought to have existed, have since been disproved, as have charges that John Demjanjuk was the infamous concentration camp guard, Ivan the Terrible.

To be as charitable as possible, Smith displays a profound misunderstanding of how professional historians determine what are historical facts and how they reach conclusions, a misunderstanding which is perhaps not surprising since neither he, nor any of his associates at the Institute of Historical Review in Southern California, are historians.

Historical "facts" and conclusions evolve over time. Historians are constantly revising earlier opinions based on new evidence and greater objectivity. This does not mean, however, that all the old facts are thrown out. Historians still hotly debate various aspects of the Civil War, but not that there was a Civil War or that approximately 600,000 Americans died in it. Likewise, there are many debatable aspects about the Holocaust: How many were killed (estimates by legitimate historians range from 4.7 to 7 million)? When did it begin? Who ordered it? Was it part of the Nazi's program from the very beginning or did it simply evolve in the course of the war? These and other differences exist. As a member of the 1,400-member international German Studies Association I can tell you, however, that there has never been a paper presented in the 17-year history of the organization which has argued that the Holocaust never occurred or that gas chambers did not exist at Birkenau.

Decision to run ad was poor judgment

In the last issue of The Central Florida Future, I saw something quite astonishing to my eyes. A so-called advertisement printed by my school newspaper titled, "A Revisionist Challenge to the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum." Before this ad was published in this newspaper, I am sure that there was great discussion over the matter (Actually, there was none—B.C.).

As a matter of fact, I am sure this is why the statement, "This is a paid advertisement," was printed in bold letters above this ad. This is clearly exhibiting the newspaper's attempt to minimize its involvement in publishing this ad. I do not recall ever seeing this "warning" placed above any other ad in the school newspaper. As a matter of fact I thought that the paper was for students to enjoy, not to have to criticize. It is quite obvious from the publicity that this author of the article received the kind of reaction he wanted. I am sure that he tried to publish this article many times before and had no apparent success. What a better target than college students? Well, thanks to whomever has the authority to throw this kind of advertisement into the newspaper, this author got exactly what he was looking for. Did anyone ever stop to think that people would be hurt from this kind of advertisement? Did it even matter to anyone?

I am not writing this to blame anyone for what this anti-semitic author wrote, I am simply criticizing the manner in which my fellow colleagues allowed this to happen. I am sure that there were other ads that could have been placed in that same space. Hopefully, this experience will teach some of you to be careful with what you publish. I guess the real question in my mind remains, "How much did this organization really pay for 'us' to run its advertisement?" Was it worth all the pain you caused so many students?

PSYCHOLOGY

Ad sacrificed the integrity of the Future

The anti-semitic advertisement which denied the existence of the Holocaust was preposterous in light of historical fact. The Holocaust was the most well-documented event in modern history.

David Bauer, editor of The Central Florida Future, claimed that he believed that the advertisement was not anti-Semitic, and that his decision to print it was based upon support for the First Amendment. The perception of this ad as not being anti-Semitic could be based on a dangerous ignorance of white supremacist propaganda or anti-Semitism on Mr. Bauer's part. I would give Mr. Bauer the benefit of the doubt, and assume that he honestly does not understand the intent of the advertisement.

I strongly support the First Amendment. However, there are certain limitations to all our freedoms. A person is free to act as he or she please as long as he does not harm someone else.

This advertisement was not only full of lies and innuendo, it was also an attempt to gain support for the genocide of the Jewish people.

By printing the advertisement in question, Mr. Bauer has helped their cause.

He has prostituted the journalistic integrity of The Central Florida Future for money. A simple apology will not be enough to right this wrong. He has voluntarily incurred a debt to humanity which must be paid. I would suggest a full disclaimer of the goals of the organization which sponsored the advertisement and an in-depth article which fully and graphically describes the sadistic and perverse atrocities of the Holocaust.

Future anti-Semitic

Yom Ha' Shoah has just been observed on April 8. This is a Jewish holiday in memorial for the six million victims of the Holocaust. I can't believe the Central Florida Future printed an article which questions the existence of one of the world's worst travesties, the Holocaust.

I understand that this article was printed because it was a paid advertisement. The Future will claim that it doesn't hold the beliefs of this article, but if it were against the beliefs of this article, it would have never been printed. The article is a lie. I can't believe the Future is now advertising hate crimes. The Future is nothing more than an anti-semitic publication.

It would be a very good idea for the people denying the Holocaust to visit the local Holocaust Memorial and Educational Center in Maitland or any of the Holocaust memorials. Visiting a memorial will allow one to sympathize with the millions and millions of innocent Jewish people of the Holocaust.

Future upheld First Admendment

Dave Bauer is to be commended for allowing Bradley Smith to run the revisionist challenge advertisement in The Central Florida Future. Mr. Bauer has demonstrated a great deal of courage by standing up to a small, vocal minority who wish to suppress our First Amendment rights to free speech and our right to freedom of the press.

As a direct result of new truths uncovered by the revisionists, the Malaysian government has decided to ban the movie "Schindler's List," stating it is historically inaccurate and reflects the privilege and virtues of only one race. It went on to say that the film is propaganda with the purpose of asking for sympathy for Jews while tarnishing the image of the German people.

Isi Leisbler, president of the Executive Council of Australian Jewry, responded to the Malaysian government's decision to ban the movie by saying, "The Malaysians have truly discredited themselves, exposing themselves as PRIMITIVE RACES." Strange, I thought it was only Nazi's, not Jews, who refer to others as PRIMITIVE RACES!

It's a pity that Hollywood cannot devote some of its energies to making a film about Jewish massacres of Arabs as Sabra and Shattila and the recent Hebron killings.

Holocaust revisionists have never said that atrocities weren't committed; most certainly they were. However, atrocities were committed by all sides. Rather than taking Smith up on his challenge and prove the revisionist wrong once and for all, a small group wishes only that people hear its point of view. If the Holocaust revisionists are wrong, then it should be a simple matter to prove them wrong. On the other hand, if the revisionists are right, then someone has a lot of explaining to do.

How sad it is when the Jewish community and others try to make a mockery of our First Amendment rights by withholding grants and other funding from colleges, while at the same time, the Israeli Army is killing and wounding Lebanese school children.

Dave Bauer is to be applauded and supported by all right-thinking individuals.

LEGAL STUDIES

Editor's Note: Due to space limitations, we were unable to run the remainder of the letters to the editor, but they have been brought to the attention of the staff.

For $114, you too can have your First Amendment right to lie

It's the last column of the semester, and not a moment too soon.

It has been a rough week, made rougher by a certain member of the Future who decided to turn a professional disagreement into a personal attack on me and the others who disagreed with him. Thanks a lot friend.

No, I'm still not a journalist, Dave, but you know as well as I do that Jane Watrell of the Channel 9 news team and everyone else who covered this wouldn't listen to a self-described Scumbag Musician and His Friends. Everyone assumed that we are a consensual organization, which couldn't be further from the truth, which is why we made our own press release.

As for the Holocaust Revisionist ad, I think everything that could possibly be said about this has been said in the pages of the Opinion section.

Just for the record, my opinion on its running was never solicited, and if it was, I would have been opposed to its running for the same reason I would be opposed to an advertisement running in the Future claiming that the Irish Potato Famine is "a drunken Mick fairytale," or that slavery is "simply a hoax perpetrated by Negro mythmakers." PAID POLITICAL PROPAGANDA BULLSH-- FROM THE LEFT OR RIGHT HAS NO PLACE IN THIS PAPER!

But what do I know; I'm just a Swiss Cake Roll-eating buffoon who doesn't know the First Amendment from shinola. Apparently, for the low, low price of $114 (which was what Bradley Smith paid for his ad), you can say what you want in The Central Florida Future, no matter how ignorant, hateful and hurtful it is.

At our last staff meeting, I asked Cap'n Bauer if I could write a column denying the existence of slavery. He said no, because I would be lying. However, when I asked if I could pay him $114 to say the same thing, he said that would be fine, because advertisements, for example (his example) "Coke is the best soft drink in the world," so essentially, my Jewish friends, Bradley Smith was just selling us Coca-Cola.

Don't you feel a whole lot better now? I sure do. In fact, I'm going to save up $114 so I can take advantage of my constitutionally guaranteed right to pull facts out of my butt.

Credibility... Shmedibility! This is America, and I can say whatever I please in The Central Florida Future (if the price is right, of course), so when I get my $114 saved, I plan to devote my advertising space to one of the following "facts"/topics:

- Jesus: He Was Such a Lame Fag That He Wouldn't Even Swallow (Thanks to Frog the Lazy Bastard for that gem).
- Martin Luther King Jr. was a Butch Lesbian.
- Johnny Appleseed was a Chronic Masturbator.
- Jonestown was Neat-O!
- The American Indians Weren't Kicked Off of Their Land (Rather, They Preferred to be Herded Into Reservations).
- Documented proof that George Bush vaginally fists billy goats.
- The nation of Albania doesn't exist (it's a conspiracy!)
- Cocaine: Delicious, Nutritious Alternative to Bran.
- A Challenge to Those Who Deny the Existence of the Tooth Fairy.

- A Revisionist Challenge to Vietnam Veterans.
- My Sexcapade with Sherilyn Fenn.
- Mother Teresa: Corrupt to the Core.
- Is Mike Dehoog Actually the Second Coming of Christ? Yes!
- How to Pull of a Drive-by Shooting Without Being Busted by The Man.
- The Shah Sleeps in Lee Harvey's Grave (win a box of Swiss Cake Rolls if you can name the band that I stole this topic from).
- Koresh is Kool!
- Charles Manson is Right.
- A Revisionist Challenge to the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum (I'll only place this ad when I'm feeling particularly moronic and malicious).

I think you get the point by now. The First Amendment does not protect liars, and to me, Bradley Smith's advertisement said something considerably more than the moral equivalent of "Coke is the best soft drink in the world." It was more like the moral equivalent of saying "Coke cures AIDS," which would constitute false advertising, which is not protected by the First Amendment.

I guess that's all for this week.

I was hoping to end this semester on a happier note, but it wasn't meant to be. God, why did you put so many bastards, cretins, and curmudgeons on this Earth, and why do they always seem to have $114 to blow on their disgusting "opinions?"

Before I end, let me just say that hopefully, my book will be out and in the UCF bookstore (in the UCF Authors section) next week. Please use some of your book buy-back moolah to buy my book. You'll thank me later.

PINK FLOYD'S THE DIVISION BELL:

A FANTASIA OPERA FOR THE '90S

Disregard this article as a normal interpretation or review of any sort. Read this and let go with what you are programmed by this society to think. See my description as a modern Fantasia and close your eyes after you read the words to envision it as such. This is the representation of The Division Bell an operatic requiem of Pink Floyd.

The song of birth. The dawn of time like a prolonged beginning sequence for "2001." Fog covered the Earth as wild beasts stalked through the forest. Actually, it's as if I'm on Spaceship Earth at Epcot. The odors pass through me like a ghost. The piano chords rage, gripping through the instrumental "Cluster One." It feels as though you are on top of a roller coaster teeter-tottering. Then the coaster disintegrates in a pit out Dante's Inferno and you fall endlessly.

The song of lost life. Walking through Harlem, smoking a cigarette down to the grain of the filter, the unknown stranger does not feel the burning sensation as it flames into his lips. The back-up singers remind me of Motown singers within a more broad rock context. The song "What Do You Want From Me" has proportions of the Moody Blues where half the song, with its angelic choraling, propels the listener as if he or she is floating in heaven.

The country-circus song. The country boys whistle on the tractor as they reap grain from the endlessly flowing hills. But it is as if the wheat stalks have hands grasping to reach you. The chords are very simple and the beat complacent in the song "Poles Apart."

Then it transforms into the country boys going to a circus. The carousel components permeate as the Siamese twins and the reptilian sliver their tongues. The freak tent is abound as babies cry at the hideousness of these creatures. If any of you have seen David Lynch's 1980 film "The Elephant Man," you would understand. This film embellishes the lonely life some people lead who keep themselves amused by the deceitful things in life.

The ocean song. A faceless person stands on a white beach consumed in cackling thunderclouds—an action I've done too often when I make films. The song "Marooned" reminds me a little too much of Queenryche's "Is There Anybody Listening" which is sort of ironic because they have been referred to as the "Pink Floyd of the 90s." That's all but a bad dream. Pink Floyd is unique.

The Wall reflection song. It is the acronym for the song "Great Day of Freedom." This is the best song on the album with regards to the superior and climatic "High Hopes," the last song on the album. "Freedom" is a tribute to one of the most integral points of human history when the "walls came tumbling down." It is an anthem of liberation. Men and women run down the streets screaming in absolute horror reflecting as a bullet penetrates their skull. The images of love and conflict slowly ooze away as their life transfer onto that of others.

The song of confused being. The smooth dwindle of the saxophone echoes throughout the hollow shadow of your stereo in the song "Wearing the Inside Out." The lights remain dim and the Chianti bites your tongue with its poignancy. It is the closest song that approaches the sound which was associated with Roger Waters, one of the original band members. A man walks slowly through a deserted moonscape without a spacesuit walking in slow motion not because he wants to but because that's all he can do.

The traveling song. This song called "Take It Back" begins with an Egyptian rhythm which is intriguing and reminded me of the beautiful neo-Gothic music of "Blade Runner." Then it becomes an all too obvious repetitious guitar chord offering in double time known as U2. He travels on a road which doesn't exist on a mountain of fire which melts into ice.

The song of nothingness. Imagine drifting through a void where creeps through your ears. The mind race has begun.

The song of decension. The grass tickles your face as you sit consumed in its weeds. It grabs your body and pulls you down into the earth. The life passes by as you witness the life of others consumed in the dirt in the song "Lost for Words" as you proceed toward the molten core of our sphere of existence.

The defeat of an archetypal god. The conclusion of this album reflects a painting of operatic and biblical proportions in the brilliant song "High Hopes." The bells ring in earnest chiming to the art of heaven then its creation becomes a funeral. We search for thought and answer for that which is beyond our comprehension. They speak of that time when "the grass was greener, the light was brighter and friends surrounded us" not now when our life "is of slow decay." The battle to decide the explanation is embedded within the march that makes one think of "The Good, The Bad and the Ugly." But this time Clint Eastwood is struck dead, never to move again because there is no heaven in his eyes.

The men in blue who serve and protect. . . Library Patrol

I walked up to Denoy DeBoer, an education major, who was busy clicking away at the computers in the library. "So, what do you think about the library patrol?" I asked him.

"I didn't know there was a library patrol. There is a library patrol?" It was enough of a puzzlement to make him look up from the keyboard, but his trance quickly returned to the screen.

So, I questioned another student, Yugi Eda, a junior majoring in marketing. "They are the people with the blue shirts." He smiled at his knowledge.

Yes, that is the LIBRARY PATROL, the few, the proud.

"They are here to enforce the rules of the library," Roger D. Simmons, head of the circulation department explained. "We felt the students would respond better if a student would talk to them instead of staff or a policeman."

Jerry Jerome, graduate tax student and Library Patrolman said: "They used to not have such colorful shirts. They got them four years ago. They used to have a badge. I heard that was fun. They don't let us wear a cap, though."

A couple of students shuffled past us and exited through the door with a loud creak. A woman accidentally set the alarm off as she walked through the sensors. Jerry graciously directed her to the front desk.

I thought about what a good patrol he was. What if she had just run out with the book? I challenged his job skills.

"We're not allowed to chase after them, but most people are good about it. We can kick them out for the rest of the semester if they don't follow the rules," Jerome said as he leaned against the wall.

Peter Bouldry, political science and accounting major and LIBRARY PATROLMAN said, "The problem is to keep people from eating in the library and to stop people from stealing books."

"People leave food, and it attracts bugs. They spill their drinks and ruin the books," Jerome explained.

"When I tell them to put away food or something, they usually do it," Bill Coffey, accounting major and LIBRARY PATROLMAN revealed. "One day a guy got mad at the desk and slammed the door, but that wasn't because of me."

"What was your hardest day on the job?" I asked Bill while I poised my pen, ready to capture the essence of patrolling.

"Um. . . that's a tough question." He scratched his head and nervously pulled on his fingers. He shrugged.

"Well, how about the funniest day?" I tried to hide the twinge of desperation in my voice.

"I don't know . . . uhh, I guess I can say this. . . One time, a guy posted up a picture of a nude girl in the bathroom. Whoever was working ripped it off. But part of it was still showing!"

"It's a pretty laid-back job," Coffey added as I scribbled madly.

"It's pretty boring," Bouldry added. "I tried to convince them to let us have guns, but they won't let us. . . Well, maybe a phazer gun." Bouldry looked off into the abyss of books and florescent lights.

"OK, thanks, Peter," I smiled. "Peter?" It was my turn to shrug and follow the throng of students as they shuffled, creaked and beeped through the sensors on their way out of the building.

But, I was different from the other students, for I possessed the secrets of the LIBRARY PATROL — information that my pen was itching to share. . .

Krause's Video House

A guide to the rediscovery of art films on video

"Laws of Gravity"

(R)
RKO Pictures
1992

At first glance, this film looks as if it were shot with a $500 budget using a super 8 camera. As you watch it, however, this impression is quickly fades as you take a personal look into a group of twenty-something friends dealing with the pressures of life and small-time crime in the heart of Brooklyn. The exploration into the characters' personalities and lifestyles is the strength behind it. The film's dialogue is violent and loud, every situation is filled with intensity and a second doesn't go by with the viewer hearing the word "f---." My only regret is that this film was never released in theaters, so that it had the chance to truly amplify the emotion it deserves. "Laws of Gravity" is without a doubt, the best film I've ever seen on video and one of the greatest discoveries I've ever found on the video shelves.

"Alberto Express"

(R) MK2 Pictures

Dark and ironic are the themes glued to this train ride into the mind of an Italian man as he paces through Italy trying to settle a debt with his father. The debt is a bill for everything his parents gave him as a kid, including food, diaper, underwear, and even the money it cost to take him home after his mother delivered him at the hospital. Although the debt is outrageous, you quickly forget its purpose as the story takes you into a wild and sarcastic turn, searching into this confused man's memory and stimulating his brain as to why he is on this quest for his life. Funny and surreal, "Alberto Express" is the only train to ride.

"Jumpin at the Boneyard"

(R)
20th Century Fox
1991

Tim Roth (Bodies, Rest and Motion) gives an under-appreciated performance as an older brother trying to save his younger from the perils of drugs in "Jumpin at the Boneyard." Although Hollywood seemed to have a hand in some of this film, the director, Jeff Stanzler, somehow carves out a very captivating tale, that touches the emotions usually lost to the everyday world. Ignoring Hollywood's easy way out-exploring what led to the brother to drugs, he instead makes an appeal-

Library Sub-culture: UCF's Love Connection

While rollerblading with some friends this past Sunday, I noticed a large gathering atop the Reflection Pond. I asked one of the guys there what was being given away, and he said that he and the rest of the people were just waiting for the UCF Library to open. Who would have thought?

I'm not a stranger to this facility myself but I never realized how important it must be.

The next day I returned to the library with a new found respect. Everywhere were people reading books, pacing down aisles and punching away on the computers.

I thought to myself, "This place ain't too bad!"

And that's when it happened. I saw a lady fast asleep at one of the study booths. She was out like the Florida Marlin's line up. Left curious from this modern version of Sleeping Beauty, I was determined to find if there were others under such a spell. Surely enough not only close by her, but on every floor were Vivarin-deficient souls lounging about. These randomly-dispersed library bums flock to this haven for down-and-out university burn-outs.

On the third floor was a sight that I had seen before. It was of a man draped over a cushioned bench. It took me a minute to dig into my subconscious to remember him but it wasn't that difficult. In an attempt not to insult him by stating his name, I will refer to him as "that guy."

Those of you who ever stepped into the library should know who I'm talking about. He's that guy you always see wandering around like he's lost, that guy who talks to himself between bathroom breaks, that guy who is always seen with his bag full of books like it was his lover. You know, that guy.

He was asleep underneath the bright reflection of the stained glass window.

I then left to go to my noontime class, but was drawn back after its conclusion. I was destined to discover some more interesting phenomena. And indeed I did.

I noticed this fairly attractive sorority girl sitting at a table. Before I could get the chance to go up to her, I was beaten by another guy. I watched him flirting with her left and right and waited patiently for my turn. In the meantime I was approached myself by another attractive girl.

Then it hit me — this place is something more grand. It is where some people go to get dates! They don't even have to pay admission or be forced to have a two-drink minimum. To most students, this can be an economic plus, a local "Love Connection" if you will.

Some time later I ran into Eddie Stevens, a library groupie, in the elevator.

"How long have you been here?" I asked.

"For about two hours," he said.

"Were you studying?" I asked again.

"No" he responded.

At this point I was quite confused. So I bugged him one last time and said, "Then why are you here?"

"Force of habit, I guess," he replied, smiling. I think some people are attracted to the library like a chemical addiction.

As the doors opened, I casually strolled out of the elevator. I now realized that the library is not just a place to go to get books. It is a center for mass social and individual reflections and interactions. At the library, people can obtain knowledge, entertainment, companionship, sanctuary and a place for rest.

Feeling quite a bit enlightened through my sudden revelation, I happened to pass the stained glass window again. Oddly enough that guy was still there snoozing away. He was surrounded this time by a few of his friends all asleep like him. I then noticed something that wasn't there before. He had drool running down his chin.

I deduced that this was no ordinary drool. It was special. It must have telepathically contacted his friends and drawn them here like some kind of beacon. Once here, it used its hypnotic fervor to put them all to sleep thus so. I was too afraid to get closer for fear I might get caught up in this eternal slumber.

I hastily tried to flee from this establishment, but found that it was harder to do than I thought. I had become a library junky without intention, another victim of the library monkey. So I then discovered a cozy spot in the northeastern corner of the fourth floor with a killer view, kicked up my feet, and entered into that contagious dreamland.

Grand Canyon: a real cliffhanger

The last installment of the 'Into the Great Wide Open' series

Like Cooke and Perry, Columbus, Ponce De Leon, or Marco Polo, we crossed this great divide in search of a better way of life for mankind. Hmmm. Well, maybe not.

In a more likely comparison, like Bill and Ted, we sought a most excellent adventure in the truly splendid style of The Hobbit, yet as ravaging as the barbaric, cleavage-revealing dames Thelma and Louis.

As most students nearing their last days of freedom with graduation approaching, and along with it, the grim reality of being a grown-up, we were bound by the chains of responsibility. A last shot at absolute alienation of society and freedom of the mind and spirit become the final wish of these future collar shirt-and-tie insurance salesmen.

A journey of sorts is necessary to relieve the soul, and although every passenger on this sinking ship of society has mentioned the desire to feel the freedom of this broad passage called America, so very few actually make the commitment and put the piece of paper on their tongue.

A 60-day quest across the natural sculptures of the Appalachians and the long stretches of grassy knolls that compose the Great Plains may not be feasible or realistic for the average person in search of unbelievable and surrealistic explorations. So if the funds are tight and the time is not available, yet the passionate urge to dive into the great wide open still tugs at your starving soul, take the old Ford Pinto, fill the tank, pack enough beer for a week and head west into the most wide-open territory known to man. To all those hungry freedom-seekers, I offer the Grand Canyon.

As my comrade Zoran and I reached the Southwest rim of Old Lady U.S.A.'s big hole, the sun had begun to rest upon the shoulders of her majestic stretches of molded clay. The upper reaches of the smooth walls shed its usual golden grin and offered a sweet purple haze as she smiled to the drifting shadows that had absorbed the Canyon's depths.

Hypnotized by the otherwise incomprehensible, and in no way comparable, vastness, I was brought back to Earth by the voice of a park ranger.

"No one should attempt this unlikely and dangerous feat in one day. It is a two-day hike and a night's camp at the bottom," the Ranger forewarned the curious hikers of the danger of making the 18-mile hike in one day. The temperatures exceed 110 degrees at the bottom of the Canyon, and the last of the drinking water is supplied five miles from the bottom. Heat strokes and deaths have resulted from people scaling the depths in less than two days.

So naturally, being crazed adventurers, we planned the morning's hike and took the necessary rations: bananas, water, water and water. Nothing short of the Colorado River would have been sufficient, and the rations would not last us for an extended overnight stay at the bottom. The next morning we packed our gear and began the descent into the great wide open.

this desolate hole, and as punkie little British tourists inquired on how many days it took to hike to the bottom and back, I looked up from under the gushing faucet, smiled a big American smile, and said "eight hours, my friend."

The long stretch between New Mexico and Florida seemed like one long Texas highway with seven hundred state troopers and desert. And although the night sky in New Mexico had only pinholes of black, as the luster of the star-filled sky was something unseen to these eyes; the rest of the journey homeward was just a reflection of the prior days.

I saw all that this homeland had to offer, from the wilderness of Yellowstone to the wildness of a blonde Illinois farmgirl.

And I found that Dorothy was right — there is no place like home. Not that Orlando

As we steadily jaunted down the path and occasionally scaled a few cliff-like recesses in order to make time, as well as take pictures (so we could look like Stallone in Cliffhanger), many people were headed up the path on their way back from camping in the Canyon the night before.

Being fresh and on our way down the hills, we said hello and gave a smile to everyone we passed. The hikers would look up as they slowly passed by and scowled and made angry faces, similar to thirsty vampires in dire need of salvation. Little did we know how our faces would look, 15 miles and seven hours later.

The fiery hell of the dusty paths offered no sympathy as my Nike sandals acquired a brownish stain and my toes a blistering fate. The closer we got to the icy waters of the Colorado River, the longer, drier and hotter it became. We doused ourselves in the rough chilled waters that were responsible for carving and sculpting this brilliant natural masterpiece and, in an unknowing way, celebrated the arrival at a destination.

The ascension was not a sensible venture. Drinking water was not available until the half-way mark; and the symptoms of heat stroke became evident. At first, I argued with myself that I was not going insane and that the Sasquatch or Bigfoot really did live in those hills. And as the signs read that delirious periods were the sign of a problem, I shook them off, until I came to the conclusion that a tall glass of ice water was more desirable than Elle Macpherson.

is the place I call home; but Mom's dinner table, a good argument with the old man, and the familiar faces I call friends who I one day will rely on as an unrelated family, is what I missed.

For the most part, though, home will remain intact and those faces, however much older, wrinkled and grayer they become, will be there when I return. But the opportunity to see the world through the eyes of a youth, and with the heart of an adventurous child, and the physique unchallenged by even the Grand Canyon herself will not always be available.

I spoke of Carpe Diem, the advice to "Seize the Day." Well, the day will not ever come to travel, and it will never seem feasible to explore, as procrastination only leads to a two-week family vacation to some resort at the age of 30. So will it lead to the bitterness of one who has not opened the soul in an effort to experience all the riches of Mother Nature, and all the wealth of man in his creative arts.

A motorcycle, another motorcycle and a lunatic, played by a hilarious John Cusak, who keeps popping up in every part of the United States, is the essence of Roadside Prophets. Adam Horowitz (Beastie Boys), playing the other biker who is obsessed with sleeping at every Motel 6 in the nation, is the tag-along of a vacationing mill worker who is on a journey to find a place to discard a complete stranger's shes. Okay, so it sounds totally pointless. . . it is. But wait, that is the point, after figuring out that life is pointless, you learn to just enjoy the sarcastic comments between Horowitz and his companion as you take an eccentric cross-country trip around various wastelands of America. Roadside Prophets is a fun and relaxing film, that if anything, you will learn how it is to sleep at a Motel 6 in California, in Texas, in Nevada, in Montana. . .

Free Coffee and Doughnuts

For over four decades the world has believed nothing could be more horrible than the holocaust, the Nazi's systematic annihilation of six million Jews. Unfortunately, we were wrong. It turns out there is something more incomprehensible--the suggestion that it never happened.

THEY CALL THEMSELVES Holocaust Revisionists, and claim all they want is scholarly investigation and open debate of an historical event. This motley collection of Neo-Nazis, anti-Semites, pseudo-academics and white supremacists has been attempting to run advertisements in college newspapers; rambling, inaccurate, and wholly indefensible, these ordinarily would be ignored as pernicious anti-Semitic nonsense and summarily dismissed. But since several college papers chose to run these ads, citing First Amendment considerations, there are a couple of points that need to be made, to put a stake in the heart of this ghastly flight of fantasy.

THE BIG LIE, REVISITED.

Holocaust "Revisionist" are really seeking new ways to recycle longtime anti-Semitic conspiracy theories. They give the game away when they charge in their books, journals, articles and speeches that the Nazi genocide--the most fully documented atrocity in human history - is a "Zionist hoax" to benefit Jews and Israel.

WHO ARE THESE GUYS, ANYWAY?

HOLOCAUST REVISIONISTS CLAIM THERE NEVER WAS A HOLOCAUST. JUST WHO ARE THESE PEOPLE, AND WHAT IS THEIR MOTIVE?

These ads are paid for by Bradley R Smith, Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust. Who is he? And what possible motive could this committee have for wasting perfectly good paper to promote this tripe? The "Committee" is a front for the Institute of Historical Review which openly promotes anti-Semitism and Jewish conspiracy theories. It works feverishly to improve the image of the Third Reich and its leaders. And it continually attacks and attempts to delegitimize the State of Israel. It has published books entitled The Six Million Swindle and The Rumor of Auschwitz. Members of the KKK, the American Nazi Party, and other white supremacist groups attend IHR conferences and avidly promote IHR propaganda. Motive enough to eliminate any Holocaust Revisionist credibility.

As for Bradley Smith, in August 1991 he told a group in Long Beach, CA that "I don't want to spend time with adults anymore. I want to go to students. They are empty vessels to be filled." Where have we heard that before?

GOEBBELS WOULD HAVE LOVED THIS.

Every time the economy plummets the racists, bigots, social orphans anti-Semites try to start a witch hunt. Any scapegoat in a storm, although Jews are preferable. Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's Minister of Propaganda, called it, "The Big Lie." (You say it often enough, and people start to believe it.) The First Amendment is well worth paying attention to, and any subject should be fair game for objective and scholarly examination. On the other hand, the marketplace of ideas envisioned by the First Amendment is not advanced one iota by an editorial decision to publish blatant and outrageous falsehoods. This week, the Holocaust, next week they'll deny American Blacks were ever enslaved.

Ads that are intentionally hurtful, or obviously false, have been rejected by responsible publications for generations. This is a perfect opportunity to continue that tradition.

Anthrax rocks; The Proclaimers suck

Can't decide which CD's to blow your hard-earned cash on? Let us help.

Anthrax
Live—The Island Years
(Island)

I had a chance to see Anthrax play live once, not too long before this album was recorded in 1991. They were awesome, to say the least. There's nothing like hearing "Caught in a Mosh" hurl at you at 110 decibels as you are actually caught in a mosh pit.

Unfortunately, this album doesn't come close to delivering what Anthrax sounds like in concert (on a good night, at least.) The sound quality is erratic, at times sounding more like a bootleg recording than a professional one. Rapper Chuck D, who joins the band for a version of "Bring the Noise," can barely be understood in the beginning of the song.

Don't get me wrong, Live still rocks. It contains some of Anthrax's best material, like "I am the Law" and "(Efilnikufesin)NFL." There are few other bands out there that can match Anthrax's raw, fast, crunching sound. It may not be the best live recording ever made, but it's better than anything I could do, so I guess I'll stop complaining.

dark passion with which she sings is totally captivating. It sometimes makes you forget that the music you're listening to sucks.

So, here's my advice to Ms. Lorson. Find another band, or, better yet, play some of the music I've written. You'll have a hit, guaranteed.

•Dave Bauer

Mazzy Star
So Tonight That I Might See
(Capitol Records)

I wasn't too thrilled when I first got this CD, but after listening to it for a while, it kind of grew on me. Most of all of the tracks are characterized by a mellow female voice and a man with his guitar.

OK. I agree that this music might put some people to sleep. But I think it is very good. It will relax the most uptight of all people. Their morbid song "Into Dust" tells a story through a dead lover. "Fade Into You" and "Blue Light" more typically represent their sound.

Mazzy Star serenades you through an hour of soulful musical contentment. Check them out.

•John Dao

The Proclaimers
Hit The Highway
(Chrysalis Records Ltd.)

What can I say about these guys? Unless you are really into twin brothers yodling with campfire-style guitar strumming, stay away from this CD!

Actually, they aren't that bad. I could listen to one or two of their tracks, but that's all I can take. All 12 songs basically sound alike, and after a few minutes of their English twang, they get damn annoying, too much for my blood anyway.

Those of you who were really got turned on by their previous "Benny and Joon" duet so much that you slipped into a coma, I guess you might get off with this more recent version of same thing as well. But for the rest the sane population, you can do without.

My kid sister sounds better than them.

Madder Rose
Panic On (Atlantic)

Before listening to Panic On, I had never heard Madder Rose. I took one look at the cover of the CD and got the impression they were some crappie, wanna-be alternative band.

I guess first impressions are generally right.

The songwriting is amateur at best, the lyrics border on stupid and the music sounds nearly identical to just about any song MTV plays during "120 Minutes."

But, and here's the big 'but,' Mary Lorson, the band's vocalist, has an amazing voice. When I say amazing, I don't mean in the technical sense. It doesn't seem like she has a great range, can hold a note for a minute or anything like that. The

"I'm so bad, I should be in detention."

"She was our Most Valuable Runner in Cross Country this season, and she hasn't slowed down since," Loftus explains. "She's doing really well for us this season in track."

So well, in fact, her times in both the 1,500 meter and the 3,000 meter at a recent meet in Tampa set new school records.

Loftus recalls that merely two years ago, Lesniak was struggling to be one of the top five runners on the UCF team. In 1993, she moved into the number three spot, but still her goals were higher. "Over the past summer she trained awfully hard, and she is now my number one runner," Loftus says.

In 1993, Lesniak capped off a successful season with an eighth place finish in the Trans America Athletic Conference meet; this year her goal is to finish in the top five. To accomplish this goal, she knows she has to be in shape not only physically, but mentally as well.

"So much of it is mental," she says. "I'm starting to think a lot more competitively."

She insists, however, the attitude among members of the UCF track team is more supportive than competitive.

"We run against each other, but we really help each other out. We have a really good support group."

Jeanne Lesniak plans on returning next season, striving to be her personal best at each and every meet. And after that? She definitely wants to keep running after college and plans in competing in 5K road races, triathlons and marathons. Whatever she chooses to do in the future, she's sure to do it with the same tremendous effort she now puts into every practice and every race.

Lesniak sums up her hard-work philosophy this way: "One time my coach wore this shirt to practice, and on the back it said 'Go hard or go home.' That's so true! If you're not going to do your best, why do it at all?"

Magic down Bulls, but lose Jeff Turner for remainder of season with knee injury

by JENNY DUNCANSON
Sports Editor

With just three games left in the regular season, the Orlando Magic are fighting for the right to begin the playoffs with home-court advantage.

After clinching a playoff berth April 8 at home against Detroit, Orlando celebrated with two more wins. But then they proved how up and down their playing can be, losing games to Charlotte at home and Boston on the road.

Magic head coach Brian Hill said he felt the team was tired, but rested before Sunday's game with the Chicago Bulls and was ready to battle for the home-court advantage.

The Magic showed up for the game ready to fight but had a difficult time getting their feet on solid ground. They led by as much as nine and were down by as much as seven in the first half. The third-period momentum swing carried the Magic to a 118-101 victory and saved them from a three-game losing streak.

"[We] had to fight off mental fatigue and physical fatigue,"

Hill said. "We felt this was a game we had to have today, coming off the Charlotte and Boston game. We came ready to play against a team who's playing for first."

Chicago is battling New York for the second spot in the Eastern Conference and both are breathing down the neck of Atlanta, one of the teams the Magic still have to face.

The Magic may have beaten the Bulls, but Orlando suffered a key loss. Forward Jeff Turner left the game with an injury in the fourth period. Monday team doctors said he has a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee. He will likely be out the remainder of the season and surgery is a possibility.

Turner has started 50 of 67 games played this season and has been a solid contributor. He had 15 points before leaving Sunday's game in the fourth period.

"He's real valuable. When he's hot, he'll hit eight out of 10 jump shots," said Shaquille O'Neal. "Larry [Krystkowiak] will have to come in and pick up the slack."

Despite the loss of Turner, Hill said this was a key victory for the Magic.

"This game was important for several reasons," said Hill. "First, we had to bounce back. And we felt we had to establish a home-court mentality."

Hill said every game the last couple of weeks has had the intensity of a playoff game. And it's only going to get worse.

"Every team we have to play is gonna have different incentives," said Hill.

Minnesota comes to town tonight, but are out of the playoff picture. The Magic travel to Atlanta Saturday to face a Hawks team that is trying to hang on to the top spot in the East.

New Jersey will be in Orlando Sunday. The Nets are hovering at the bottom of the pack in the East and will be battling to keep from falling out of the playoff picture all together.

And Orlando's incentive is to hold onto the coveted fourth place and go into their first-ever playoff game with the home-town fans cheering them on.

(DeHoog/Future)

Dennis Scott is averaging 12.5 points per game and is fourth on the Magic in scoring.

Jenny Duncanson OFFSIDES

Once again, sports fans, your favorite sports columnists have teamed up to go Officially Offsides.

This is unofficially our last column. (Please, stop your crying.) We will be here throughout the summer, but some of you will not. And we will be gone to graduation in August. (Yeah!)

We come together this week to thank all our faithful readers who have enjoyed our bickering during the last two years. And while we found a great number of things we disagreed about, there were many issues we were on the same side of the argument. We'd like to share some of those with you:

- Orlando should have embraced the Canadian Football League. This city will never be "Major League" until it embraces so-called minor sports.

- UCF baseball coach Jay Bergman is a delightful man. Plus, coach Bergman gives our aspiring Sports Editor Jason Swancey something humorous to talk about with his friends. Our favorite tale is the one where Bergman swats Jason on the butt after a game. But, Mr. Swancey tells it much better!

- UCF football coach Gene McDowell is a difficult man. Enough said. It's too easy.

- Orlando can't support a Major League baseball team. Check out attendance at Orlando Cubs games if you don't believe us.

- Hiring UCF basketball head coach Kirk Speraw was a great move. Speraw is a tremendous motivator and a coach UCF should find a way to keep.

- The Golden Knights will go back to the NCAA basketball tournament. There's not one team in the Trans America Athletic Conference strong enough to beat them.

- The Trans America Athletic Conference is a dumb name. Just ask any of our writers. Let's see, we've seen Trans Atlantic, Trans American, Trans America-Atlantic, the list goes on and on.

Trace Trylko OFFICIAL WORD

- Orlando won't get the L.A. Raiders. Al Davis is using O-Town like baseball teams have used St. Petersburg.

- Orlando won't get an NHL team, because fans never supported the Tampa Bay Lightning when they came to town.

- Having credentials to games is really cool.

- UCF Arena Director Vic Collazo is money greedy and doesn't care about what students want. Why else would intramural activities be kicked out of the Arena?

- UCF President John Hitt's best move was hiring Athletic Director Steve Sloan.

- World Cup soccer proves Orlando cares more about tourists than its own residents.

- Predators' quarterback Ben Bennett is not a good sports caster.

- Luge is the best Winter Olympic sport.

- Orlando Magic head coach Brian Hill is good, but ex-coach Matt Guokas got the short end of the stick.

- If you have to flash "LOUD" on the scoreboard, your fans suck. See next item.

- Orlando Magic fans suck. It's not a game for them, it's a social event. See previous item.

- The Magic won't go to the next level until they can win close ball games in the fourth period.

- Having the Chicago Cubs Double-A team in Orlando is awesome. You'll find us at many games this summer.

- The Future has the best sports photographer in Mike DeHoog. (Thanks for all your service Mike, we're gonna miss you. When you make it big-time, please buy a comb!)

- Tommy Stewart is a funny guy. (Thanks for all the "Ten Trivial Tidbits".)

Thanks to all who make this job somewhat bearable at midnight on Monday and curses to those who make it unbearable in those same wee hours of the morning.

Stand and cheer, kind readers, and remember, the sports beat goes on.

this weekend. The men captured the second seed behind heavily favored Florida International. The women tied for second with Stetson and Charleston, but are the fourth seed by way of tie-breakers. Being dropped to a fourth seed may be a blessing in disguise because the women may not meet number one seeded FIU until the finals. In the first round the women will face Mercer. The men will face the Samford vs. Mercer winner.

The women ended the season winning 13 of their last 14 matches, losing 5-4 to Rollins April 12. "The girls are playing their best tennis of the year. I think they will do very well. We have a real shot this year because of our strong depth. I have eight strong players on this team," said UCF head coach Gail Falkenberg.

The men have slipped a bit at the end of the season. "The men play with such emotion that it is sometimes hard for them to get into a match that doesn't count much at the end of year. Anything less than a second place finish would be considered a disappointment," said Falkenberg.

The women will be led by Lara Froelich and Adrienne Wood, both 15-3 during the regular season.

"Only FIU can really take us out. If we play well in the lower positions, we can win," Wood said.

The men continue to be led by Christian Carlstrom. Carlstrom posted a 16-2 singles record while going 11-5 with number one doubles partner Fredrik Anderson. The men's only defeat not decided by one match to number one seed FIU. Can they beat them this time? "Absolutely!" claims Falkenberg.

The men and the women travel to Charleston, S.C. this weekend hoping to capture a highly contested TAAC trophy.

Sloan joins Jordan, Quayle, Spurrier and Marino on the links in Kissimmee

by JENNY DUNCANSON
Sports Editor

What do Michael Jordan, Dan Marino, Mario Lemieux, Dan Quayle, Maury Povich, Randy Quaid, Johnny Bench, Steve Spurrier and UCF Athletic Director Steve Sloan have in common?

They all have single-digit handicaps.

And that qualifies them to participate in the inaugural $150,000 Celebrity Golf Association Classic of Orlando. The event, which takes place April 28-May 1, will kick off the 1994 CGA Tour.

Sloan will tee up with the field of celebrities at the Falcon's Fire Golf club in Kissimmee.

Sloan says he's not a serious golfer, not like some of the other participants.

"I'm not really a professional golfer," said Sloan. "They (the other players) are all professionals. They take this very seriously."

Sloan likes to play more for fun and relaxation.

"Tournament golf is different from fun golf. I'm not sure how I'll do in this setting."

Sloan does not, however, rule out the possibility of winning the tourney, which has a cash prize. What would he do with the money if he is victorious?

"Whatever money I might win I will likely donate to the Knights Boosters. I might be able to win. We'll have to see."

And for those who would like to see how Sloan does, the tournament is open to the public.

Tickets for the event are $12 for adults per day and $6 for students, children under 12 and senior citizens.

More than 1,000 Central Florida kids participate in free sports camps at UCF

by JENNY DUNCANSON
Sports Editor

UCF, in its quest to become a Division I-A powerhouse, has tried out a new strategy for recruiting fans.

The UCF Athletic Complex was the site of the first annual UCF Sports Camps Saturday, offered free to all area children grades K-8. Over 1,000 children showed up to participate in football, basketball, baseball, volleyball and soccer. The cheerleaders even held a clinic to teach those who cheer on the athletes.

The idea for a free camp came from K-Club President Ron Johnson. The K-Club is UCF's varsity letter-winners club. Johnson played defensive end for the Knights and was an All-American in 1979 and '80. He joined the K-Club at its inception in 1984 and became president last June.

Since becoming president, Johnson has made it his goal to better market sports programs at UCF.

"My goal is to create young UCF fans, before they become Florida or Miami fans," Johnson said.

Johnson has the complete support of the Alumni Association.

"My initial reaction was 'great'," said Tom Messina, Director of Alumni Relations. "The Alumni Association is just interested in getting recognition for UCF.

Our goal is to get people to the university and see what's going on. And we wanted an event for the children of our alumni. I just thought it would be hard to get all of the coaches together, but Ron did it."

"I went to the coaches and I said 'I'm Ron Johnson. We're having a K-Club weekend. Here's what we're doing.' And every coach said yes. Every coach was 100-percent supportive and agreed to participate."

And every coach showed up, along with most of their players. And they were all very pleased with the turnout.

"I thought it was super," said head men's soccer coach Bob Winch. "We try to get out into the community but it's probably easier to get the community to come here. It was an excellent turnout, the players were excited, the kids were excited."

Golden Knights' basketball player Howard Portersaid he wanted to help teach the kids.

"I like working with kids," Porter said. "I realize that we have a great influence and we can motivate kids. I want them to say no to drugs and stay in school. If you play a sport it automatically stimulates interest in college because you want to take it to the next level."

Most kids couldn't decide what was the best part of the day—the camp, meeting the players or the free lunch which was sponsored by Publix, Pepsi, Pretzel's Bar and Grille, Kids at Play and T.G. Lee Foods.

"The food," said 11-year-old Justin Kerlin, who wanted to participate in football, basketball and baseball, but finally decided to learn from head baseball coach Jay Bergman. "We learned how to field the ball right, how to throw right. It was really fun. And I liked the coaches that helped."

Justin's father, James Kerlin, is an alumnus and received a notice of the event in the mail.

"I tasked him and he wanted to come out," Mr. Kerlin said. "He's been to UCF's basketball camp and really enjoyed it. I think this is great, I think the kids really enjoyed it themselves and I think the UCF athletes enjoyed themselves too."

"I liked it, it was fun," said Chris Pirnat, who came to play basketball. "I liked when we learned how to dribble. I learned how to shoot better and how to dribble right. And I liked meeting all the players."

Everyone seemed happy with the turnout. Manny Rodriguez, Assistant Director of Alumni Relations, said the phone at his office rang all week with interested parents seeking more information. Johnson said he hopes to make this an annual event. He seems to have the support of the coaches and hundreds of Central Florida kids.

Golden Panthers claw UCF, take East Division lead

If you get a hit one out of every three times at bat in baseball you're a .333 hitter and considered to be at the top of your game. However, if you only win one out of every three games you play on a continual basis you're considered to be a basement team. The Florida International University Golden Panthers (30-15, 9-3) took two of three once again from UCF (25-18, 7-5) this past weekend, making it four out of the last six over a two week period. The Knights took the first game 7-3 and were swept in the doubleheader Saturday by FIU 5-1 and 4-3.

UCF won the opener Friday evening, despite committing six errors. The Knights got a complete game from Mike Halperin, who now has a 6-5 record to go along with his team-leading 68 strikeouts. He gave up only one earned run on five hits. Centerfielder Tony Marrillia (.288 avg.) had two hits, as did Frank Fucile.

"Our hitting just isn't there, were not hitting the ball in key situations...we're just not hitting the ball," commented second baseman Eric Golden.

Saturday, UCF didn't fare as well, as the team was able to muster only six total hits in the twin-bill. In the first game the Knights lost 5-1, and lefty Jay Veniard (6-1) suffered his first defeat. Going into this game UCF was tied with FIU in the Eastern division at 7-3. Afterwards the Knights found themselves a game behind, and losing momentum going into the series finale.

In the second game of the doubleheader, the UCF bats remained dormant once again. FIU had no problem hitting the ball, in fact they hit double digits collecting 10 hits en route to a narrow 4-3 victory.

The Knights are now two games behind in a race UCF coach Jay Bergman saw coming from the very beginning.

"I knew it would go down to the wire with everyone still in it. This is a strong conference, that might not be decided until the final game has been played."

The Knights have a rough road ahead, playing eight consecutive games on the road following last night's home game with the

With only four meets remaining, the UCF track and field team is shifting into high gear, riding out the final weeks of a season that has been filled with ups and downs.

While other athletic teams at UCF are gearing up for their Trans America Athletic Conference Championships, the track team will not have a conference meet this season. Since less than 50 percent of schools in the TAAC have track programs, no conference meet will be held.

Coach Doug Loftus feels his team has done quite well this season. The Knights have already set eight school records and Loftus has high hopes for the rest of the season as well.

"We're expecting to set quite a few more records in the next month or so when we start peaking for the bigger meets coming up," he said.

One reason for the team's progress is the incredible size of the women's team. With almost 25 runners, the team is one of the largest in school history.

"That is a very big plus for our program," Loftus said.

Jeanne Lesniak, a junior, is one member of this talented team and Loftus considers her his number-one runner. A distance runner, Lesniak set two school records at a meet in Tampa earlier this month.

Looking to the future, Loftus named runners Sharia Bell and Olen McLean as ones to watch. Bell runs the 800 meter and has done consistently well this season. With intense weight training over the summer, Loftus expects her to be a really big competitor next year. McLean set three records this year as a freshman, and Loftus expects much from her in the future.

"[McLean] is a wonder," Loftus explained. "She's really a tough competitor, and she's got a load of talent."

McLean is concentrating on the heptathlon and competes in the shot put, the long jump and the 400 meter.

The men's team also has some young talent; freshman Charlie Cerney is only half a second away from setting the school record in the 400 meter.

As for the more experienced runners, Rene Placencia and Erik Lipham, both distance runners, they have been doing extremely well this season.

"They should do a great job for us in the upcoming meets," Loftus said.

Drumeco Lauriston holds the UCF record in the long jump and in the 4x100 meter relay. Loftus says Lauriston's 9.8 second relay time is a world class time.

Robin Holmes, who anchors the men's relay, has also had a successful season, placing first in his heat at the Florida Relays in Gainesville.

The 4x100 meter relay team is doing so well that Loftus thinks the team might be able to qualify for the national meet. If the runners do qualify, it will be the first time UCF has participated in an NCAA championship in track.

Even though they have no TAAC championship to look forward to, the UCF track team is looking ahead. The biggest meets for the team are in the weeks to come, and Loftus has high expectations for his team.

The smashing Knights were truly golden as both the men's and the women's tennis teams cruised at the end of their regular seasons. The men finished 18-6, despite a season ending loss to Georgia Southern. The women peaked the last month of the season and finished 17-4, following a 8-1 shellacking of Jacksonville University.

Both teams are seeded heading into the Trans America Athletic Conference tournament

"Go hard or go home."

That's what Jeanne Lesniak believes. A distance runner for the UCF track team, Lesniak credits her success to discipline and hard work. When it comes to running, she doesn't hesitate to put in the extra effort needed to accomplish her goals.

"You only get out of it what you put into it," she says.

This theory doesn't just apply to running either; Lesniak, a 21-year-old junior, believes in putting her all into her school work as well. The health care administration major carefully balances an 18-hour course load with daily track practice and weekly meets.

"Jeanne's a very hard worker," says UCF track coach Doug Loftus.

Lesniak began running in high school to keep in shape for soccer, but now track and cross country are her primary sports. She enjoys running because "you just go all out, and when you're done you feel great."

And Lesniak sure has a lot to feel great about this year.

Jeanne Lesniak put extra effort into her off-season training schedule and earned the number one spot on the track team.
